The Sense of Place Index measures the percent of residents who express a positive connection, a strong sense of stewardship, and a sense of pride about being from Puget Sound. This indicator will inform us about peoples' emotional connection to Puget Sound.

Key Vital Sign Indicator Results

- Over 75 percent of Puget Sound residents “agree” or “strongly agree” that Puget Sound plays a role in their identity, pride, and attachment.
- Those living in the northern and western Puget Sound counties expressed slightly higher sense of place on average. There was no significant difference among Latinx and non-Latinx respondents in 2020.
- These data have not changed since 2018.

Contributing Partners

[Image of Oregon State University logo]